CINCINNATI, OH – November 15, 2007 – Public Allies Cincinnati, a program of BRIDGES for a Just Community, announced a $10,000 grant from the Marge and Charles J. Schott Foundation to support Public Allies projects and to help keep young professionals in Cincinnati.

“The grant from the Schott Foundation is a significant contribution to Public Allies, which helps create a new generation of young leaders in our own community, and encourages them to stay here to continue their careers and make a contribution,” said Dayle Deardurff, vice president of development for BRIDGES.

Public Allies Cincinnati, locally a program of BRIDGES for a Just Community and nationally a part of AmeriCorps, is a leadership development organization created to prepare young leaders for careers in public life. About Public Allies

Public Allies Cincinnati, a program of BRIDGES for a Just Community, is a leadership development organization created to prepare a new generation of leaders for careers in public life. Public Allies seeks to tap into the often overlooked and tragically undervalued voice of diverse young adults who have traditionally not had access to many of the more conventional leadership opportunities. Public Allies became one of the first and most often lauded models for AmeriCorps programs and continues to be funded by AmeriCorps.
